Date of application:	23.08.2021
Duration - decision:	28.09.2021 - 28.09.2024
Valid until:	28.09.2024

The UDI grants you a temporary residence permit as a skilled worker according to the Immigration Act section 23, see the Immigration Regulations section 6-1 first paragraph.

Duration of the permit and when you can start to work

If the duration is from a specific date (dd.mm.yy):

You can work before you get your residence card. You can only work in the period your permit is valid for.

Identity

The UDI finds that the identity is made probable.

You have presented a passport from your home country as documentation of your identity. The passport has not been verified.

Grounds

All of the conditions for a temporary residence permit have been met.

Content of the permit

1. Restrictions and conditions

Position: You are only allowed to take employment as a Researcher. You cannot take a different type of work. You can get another job title without having to apply for a new permit as long as you continue to do the same type of work as before.

Skilled work: The work must require skilled competence and your competence as a skilled worker must be relevant to the work you do.

One employer: You can only have one employer. You cannot have employment relationships with several employers at the same time.

Full-time: You must work full-time and have a full-time position. You cannot include work as a casual employee («ringevikar/tilkallingshjelp») to meet the requirement for full-time work.

Pay: The requirements for pay and working conditions must be met. If there is a collective agreement in the industry you are working, you must be paid in accordance with the collective agreement. The pay cannot be lower than the minimum rate for those with vocational education or higher education. If you are working in an industry without a collective agreement, your pay cannot be poorer than is normal for someone in your occupation in the place you are working. «Place» means a geographical area and not the individual workplace. Depending on the type of position, it can be a particular part of Norway or Norway as a whole.

You cannot:

- engage in business activity in Norway
- carry out assignments for a client in Norway

Changes: You must apply for a new permit if you want changes, such as if you want to take a different type of work or have reduced working hours. On our website you can find information about the requirements to be granted a new permit and how to apply: www.udi.no/skilled. You must wait until the new application is granted before you can begin.

2. Change of employer

- You can change employer.
- You can get another job title without having to apply for a new permit as long as you continue to do the same type of work as before.
- Before you can start working for a new employer, your old employment relationship must be terminated.
- It is not necessary to notify the police or the UDI if you go directly from an employer to a new employer.
- You have a duty to report to the police if you are unemployed between the employment relationships. See point 4.
- All the restrictions and conditions in point 1. must be met in the new employment relationship.

3. Information about entries and basis for other permits

- You can travel to Norway several times during the period your permit is valid.
- The permit forms the basis for permanent residence permit. You can apply for a permanent residence permit when you have stayed in Norway for the last three years with permits that forms the basis for permanent residence permit.

- The permit forms the basis for family immigration. Your closest family members can apply for a residence permit.

4. Unemployment and job seeking period

If your employment relationship ends, you may stay in Norway to look for work for up to six months, see the Immigration Regulations section 6-11 second paragraph.

It is a condition that your residence permit is valid. It is also a condition that you notify the police within the deadline:

- You must notify the police within seven days after your employment relationship has ended. It is your last working day that determines the date the obligation to report applies from. Any payment of salary after the last working day does not postpone your obligation to report.
- You must also notify the police within seven days if you start in a new employment relationship.
- You will find contact information to the police where you can give your notification here: www.politiet.no/where-to-meet
- If you cannot find a new job within the deadline, the requirements for the residence permit are no longer met. You must inform the police or the UDI that you have not found a new job.

5. Renewal

- The permit can be renewed.
- You must meet in person at the police to apply for a renewed residence permit and hand in your documents. Before this, you must register your application form on the Application Portal, where you book an appointment for attendance at the police. There may be several weeks waiting time.
- If you hand in the application for renewal of your residence permit at the police no later than one month before your current residence permit expires, you can continue to work while you are waiting. The restrictions and conditions of the permit given in this decision apply all the time while you are waiting for the new decision. The rules about this are stated in the Immigration Act section 61 sixth paragraph.
- If your residence permit has expired and you hand in the application at the police later than one month before your permit expires, you are not entitled to work while you are waiting for an answer.

You can find more information about applying for renewal on our website: www.udi.no/renewalwork

6. Norwegian language training and social studies

You may have an obligation to participate in Norwegian language training and social studies. You must contact the municipality to find out if this applies to you. If you have an obligation to participate in Norwegian language training and social studies, one of the requirements to be granted a permanent residence permit or Norwegian citizenship is that you have completed the tuition. You must contact your municipality of residence for information regarding your rights, as it is the municipality that will give you guidance about this.

7. Revocation

In some cases, the UDI can revoke your permit. The most important reasons are

- if you have given incorrect information or withheld information of great significance for granting you this permit.
- if you break the conditions for your permit, for example that you are no longer working with what you got a permit for, or you are working less than your permit allows you to, or your pay is too low.

You can find more information about revocation on our website:
www.udi.no/loseresidencepermit

8. Expulsion

You can be expelled if you violate Norwegian law or if you have given false information or if you have worked illegally. If you get expelled, you must leave Norway and you will get a prohibition on entry. You cannot re-enter Norway for the duration of the prohibition on entry. Also, a decision on expulsion may lead to a prohibition on entry to the Schengen area.
